The Story

Gobo lives in the big city as a convenience store clerk. He has always believed that he is destined for greatness like the many adventurers he sees. Even though his life is very uneventful. Until one day a mysterious drunken figure mistakenly pays for its beer with a magic box instead of money. Gobo takes this as a sign from the divine and pockets the box. He discovers that the box has the magical ability to morph the holder into whatever creature they think of. Gobo uses this to become famous. When he makes his big T.V. appearance however, the mysterious figure notices him and confronts him during the broadcast. A big fight over the box ensues, with both of them using the box's power. Gobo is able to kill the thing, but in the process the box explodes. After having almost died, he decides that this is all just too crazy and that his life before the box was actually okay. Battered and beaten, Gobo returns to the convenience store.

Environments

REC

Culture

- Similar to 80s New York city culture mixed with medieval culture.
- There are knights and kings.
- Things work similar to a fantasy rpg where the creatures that would have a lower level are seen as less than.

Economy

- The lower creatures like goblins do all the lame jobs.
- Whereas the creatures like elves and humans get to be the adventurers and make lots of money by discovering magical artifacts.

Magic System

- There are magical artifacts that give the holder a magical power.
- The Box is the artifact that Gobo gets, it allows the holder to transform into whatever he thinks of.

Geography

- The City is basically New York city, with some alterations to accommodate the creatures that live there.
- Like smaller entrances and exits for the smaller creatures.
- The land is broken up into six kingdoms.
- The story takes place in the Kingdom of the Smiling King.
